What is the Global Action Week?

Global Action Week is one of the major focal points for the education movement. It provides every national and regional education campaign with an opportunity to highlight one area of the Education For All agenda and make targeted efforts to achieve change on the ground, with the added support of education campaigners and millions of members of the public worldwide joining together for the same cause.

The global campaign for education first started to organize Global Action Week in 2001 as an annual occasion. During this week, the national, regional, and international education alliances, campaigns, and organizations take necessary actions to shed light on one aspect of the Education for All Agenda; unify their voices on the same topic; and propose coordinated demands for politicians.

Global Action Week on Education and Disability will run 4-10 May 2014.

Previous themes and slogans of Global Action Weeks covered topics like "Literacy and Lifelong Learning" (2009); "Financing Quality Public Education" (2010); "Education for Women and Girls" (2011); "Early Childhood Care and Education" (2012); and "Every Child Needs a Teacher" (2013).

Inclusive Education for Persons with Disabilities

The Global Action Week in 2014 focuses on inclusive education for persons with disabilities (children, youth and adults), following the Education for all objectives articulated by the Education for All "EFA" campaign.

The number of disabled people from all age categories around the world almost exceed 1 billion, around 15 percent of the world population. In a world full of legislative, cultural, and social barriers, engaging disabled persons in all walks of social life and define the concept of integrating education as a set of values, principles, and practices to deliver effective education for all a major challenge.
